“ One year ago I found myself alone one night, walking to no real destination. It was a difficult time in my life and by chance I encountered Jessie by the park. He approached me and asked me if I was alright. Trying to be tough , I said yes, he obviously saw through the lie. I didn't actually know him at the time but had always known him, if that makes sense. He offered to walk me home or to a friend or families place if I had one to go to. Seeing his kind face and knowing his intentions were noble, I agreed. Due to hilarious happenings we only made it most of the way, but we became friends that evening and I will keep the details in my heart as to what made us decide to go back to circle k a personal memory as it will always be a beautiful reminder of the innocence we are all capable of even as adults in a world that can be so cold. He gave me hope that night that I was going to be ok. As long as people with love for their fellow man were are willing to help someone just because it's the kind thing to do, the world is not all that bad. It's just one angel short now. I was blessed to have had the honor of his company and friendship. I'll truly miss our random encounters and will never forget what he did for me. He was a gentleman and I thank you Jessie.

“ I am so sorry for your loss. I didn't know Jessie. But he became a person of interest to me. My heart breaks for you all. I offered Jessie a ride 2 x, both which he declined. I always noticed he never bothered anyone, never ask fo anything. Sometimes i would see 5x a wk walking same road. Sometimes i would get him something to drink or give him a few dollars. He always smiled said Thank You & Sometimes God Bless No i didn't know Jessie, but I believe God does.
