“Loved her! She certainly was “loving and feisty” just as the obituary stated. She and I were next door neighbors for a few years and I missed her when she and Andy moved away. She came straight to our house when Andy passed. She talked to me about losing her son and, on Mother’s Day, we would exchange texts because being mothers was important to us both. She loved her little dog — and it was mutual! Andy once told me that, when Julie started working, the dog would wear him out going to the door to go outside - then do nothing. I explained that the dog was looking for her! And she loved catching fish and bringing us some already fried! Missing her still, Gaila
